UGL secures $370 million in new projects

Sydney: UGL Limited (ASX: UGL) today announced that it has been awarded approximately $370 million in new projects across Australia. More than $270 million of the new awards are resources projects, driven by ongoing significant levels of private investment. Key project highlights include:

- Construction of the new Solomon mine power station for Fortescue Metals Group (Fortescue) in Western Australia.
- Provision of the rail signalling and communications systems for the Solomon Rail Spur for Fortescue in Western Australia.
- A two year contract with Rio Tinto Limited for the provision of maintenance services at the Hail Creek mine in Queensland.
- A new three year contract for the provision of maintenance services at BHP Billiton Mitsubishi Alliance (BMA) coal operations' Gregory Crinum Mine in Queensland.
- An upgrade to the Sydney West to Holroyd Transmission Line for TransGrid in New South Wales.
- A number of new power systems and power transmission projects across Queensland.

UGL's Managing Director and CEO, Richard Leupen said: "Securing these significant new wins provides further support to the continued solid performance of our engineering businesses. These wins reflect the strength of our client relationships across a diversified base of blue-chip customers and are demonstrative of our ability to convert the recent record levels of tendering activity across a number of our core markets.

"A significant pipeline of opportunities remains visible supported by substantial levels of private investment and government spend. We anticipate ongoing success in converting a number of these opportunities as they are awarded."
